PROTECTING OUR PLANET

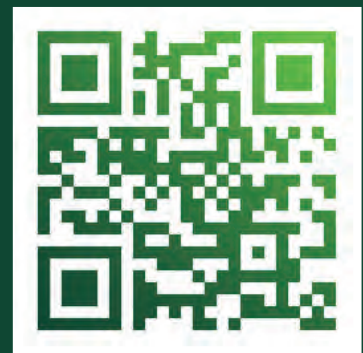

ONE ACRE AT A TIME

We all take actions big and small to help our planet. For U.S. soybean farmers, that means taking extra steps to maintain soil health and implementing sustainable farming practices like planting cover crops. Not only does this help ensure a happy planet, but it also helps produce quality soybeans – an important plant protein we all rely on.

4-H Builds Leaders for Today and the Future

“Making it through a PhD in Astrophysics really comes down to passion and tenacity. If I were to boil my entire decade in 4-H into one word that describes how it shaped me as a person, it would be tenacity. Overcoming my fear of speaking in front of an audience, getting through tough birthing seasons when you lose does and their kids, and surviving 100-degree-plus fair weeks made me who I am and created the foundation upon which I’ve built my career as a scientist.”

– Olivia Young, Allegheny County 4-H Alumna

“Participating in the inaugural 4-H international program with Tanzania gave me a new perspective to a whole different type of career possibilities. It helped me realize that I could connect my interest with agriculture and international affairs. As a diplomat, the experiences I had in 4-H and with the international 4-H program has had the greatest impact on my career for the USDA, representing U.S. agricultural interests at U.S. embassies abroad.”

– Joseph Degreenia, Anne Arundel 4-H Alumni
